

Jane Maloney (she/her) is the Land Steward at Sudbury Valley Trustees in Sudbury, MA. She grew up in New Jersey where the most exposure to the outdoors she had was at the beach and in the woods behind her parents' backyard. While getting her bachelor's degree in environmental science at St. Michael's College in Vermont, she discovered a love for hiking and rock climbing, and worked as a field guide for the campus's Adventure Sports Center. After a couple of stints with the Appalachian Mountain Club as a crew leader on the Bay Circuit Trail and a brief move to Southern Oregon, Jane made her way back to New England to work for SVT. Alongside removing invasive species, managing volunteers, and visiting properties all over the SuAsCo watershed, she is currently pursuing a Master's degree in sustainability at Tufts University. In her spare time, she's usually biking or running (slowly) around Boston, traveling around the country to see new parks, or hanging out with her dog, Maeby.
