

John Turvey is the Volunteer Program Coordinator for the Essex County Greenbelt Association. Since joining Greenbelt, John has developed new stewardship and community science volunteer programs focusing on property maintenance, mapping, and grassland bird monitoring. He began his career in middle and high school education and holds a Master of Arts degree in Teaching. Drawing on his teaching expertise, John led NOAA Meaningful Watershed Educational Experience programs for DC public high schools in the Anacostia River watershed. Before coming to Greenbelt, he directed programming at Kingman Island conservation area in Washington, DC, where he worked closely with local public schools and the District Government. His work centered on environmental education, volunteer programming, workforce development, stewardship, and the operation of a stormwater trash interceptor.
