

Olivia Houde (she/her) is a Land Steward at the Springfield Water & Sewer Commission. At the Commission, Olivia assists in the effort to maintain the health of the watershed of Cobble Mountain and Borden Brook Reservoirs. This involves invasive species management, operating trail cameras, boundary and parcel monitoring, making maps using GIS, and completing reports related to source water protection. She previously worked as the Stewardship Coordinator at the Greater Worcester Land Trust, first serving as a 2-term TerraCorps member, then transitioning to a full-time staff position. She graduated from Westfield State University with a B.S. in Regional Planning in 2022, where she interned with the Pioneer Valley Planning Commission in the Historic Planning department. The outdoors have always been a part of her life, from adventures in the White Mountains to the foothills of the Sierras, all of which she is deeply grateful for. In her copious free time, she is likely traveling somewhere (or daydreaming about it), hiking, practicing film photography, or playing with her cat, Snickers.
